DETAILED ACTION

Continued Examination Under 37 CFR 1.114

A request for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, including the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e), was filed in this application after final rejection. Since this application is eligible for continued examination under 37 CFR 1.114, and the fee set forth in 37 CFR 1.17(e) has been timely paid, the finality of the previous Office action has been withdrawn pursuant to 37 CFR 1.114. Applicant's submission filed on September 23, 2002, has been entered.

Priority

Acknowledgment is made of applicant's claim for foreign priority based on an application filed in Japan (11-074392) on March 18, 1999. It is noted, however, that applicant has not filed a certified copy of the Japanese application as required by 35 U.S.C. 119(b).

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negated by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 3-7 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Applicant's admitted prior art (AAPA) in view of Tsushima et al. (U.S. Patent No. 5,658,082).

AAPA is found on page 2 of the specification, and teaches extending the life of cylindrical roller bearings or needle roller bearings, as exemplified in Unexamined Patent

Art Unit: 3726

Publication (Kokai) No. 5-239550. Longer life is achieved by improving a retained austenite amount of a surface layer by about 30%, and subjecting the surface layer to a specific heat treatment for applying a residual compression stress. Thereafter, the part is subjected to specific surface machining so that the surface is formed with micro concavo-convex portions in random directions.

Thus, AAPA teaches the method essentially as claimed, but lacks a specific teaching of “carbonitriding” as claimed.

However, Tsushima et al. disclose that carburizing treatments for bearing components are insufficient for extending their service lives. To address these concerns, Tsushima et al. teach improved wear resistance and heat resistance may be obtained by carbonitriding the bearing structures.

Therefore, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time of the invention to subject AAPA’s bearing structure to carbonitriding, as taught by Tsushima et al., to further extend the service life thereof.

Response to Arguments

Applicant's arguments filed September 23, 2002, have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant argues that Tsushima does not teach a retained austenite in the range of 30%-80%. However, Tsushima explicitly teaches a retained austenite in the range of 20%-40% (e.g. see claim 1), which is clearly within applicant’s claimed range. Although Tsushima fails to list an example in Table 1 in which the retained austenite is between 30% and 80%, the explicitly disclosed range of 20%-40% disclosed by Tsushima cannot be ignored.

Conclusion

All claims are drawn to the same invention claimed in the application prior to the entry of the submission under 37 CFR 1.114 and could have been finally rejected on the grounds and art of record in the next Office action if they had been entered in the application prior to entry under 37 CFR 1.114. Accordingly, THIS ACTION IS MADE FINAL even though it is a first action after the filing of a request for continued examination and the submission under 37 CFR 1.114. See MPEP § 706.07(b). Applicant is reminded of the extension of time policy as set forth in 37 CFR 1.136(a).

A shortened statutory period for reply to this final action is set to expire THREE MONTHS from the mailing date of this action. In the event a first reply is filed within TWO MONTHS of the mailing date of this final action and the advisory action is not mailed until after the end of the THREE-MONTH shortened statutory period, then the shortened statutory period will expire on the date the advisory action is mailed, and any extension fee pursuant to 37 CFR 1.136(a) will be calculated from the mailing date of the advisory action. In no event, however, will the statutory period for reply expire later than SIX MONTHS from the mailing date of this final action.
